A PROCLAMATION,
By the President of the United States of America.

The approaching close of another year brings with it the occasion for renewed thanksgiving and acknowledgment to the Almighty Ruler of the Universe for the unnumbered mercies which He has bestowed upon us.

Abundant harvests have been among the rewards of industry. With local exceptions health has been among the many blessings enjoyed. Tranquillity at home and peace with other nations have prevailed. Frugal industry is regaining its merited recognition and its merited rewards.

Gradually, but, under the providence of God, surely, as we trust, the nation is recovering from the lingering results of a dreadful civil strife.

For these and all the other mercies vouchsafed, it becomes us as a people to return heartfelt and grateful acknowledgments, and with our thanksgiving for blessings we may unite prayers for the cessation of local and temporary sufferings.

I, therefore, recommend that on Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of November next, the people meet in their respective places of worship, to make their acknowledgments to Almighty God for His bounties and His protection, and to offer to Him prayers for their continuance.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 14th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, and [L.S.] of the independence of the United States the ninety-seventh.

U. S. GRANT,
By the President:
HAMILTON FISH,
Secretary of State.

An Anomaly in a Republic.

It is a fact that there is too much haste to be rich in the world, particularly so in this country. The enormous accumulations of some Americans are the envy of most, and the wonder of all. However, wealth is generally achieved with the help of intelligence; and it is one redeeming mark of the age that it is frequently employed as the means of self-improvement, and sometimes of enlarged philanthropy. When so used, the acquisition of property is as noble as it is to be a great philosopher or statesman—provided it be done by honorable means. A great merchant or manufacturer can assist mankind as well as other men; he can help others while growing rich, and set before the world an example of well-directed industry and enterprise. Wealth honorably gained, and employed in active benevolence, doubly enriches its possessor.

But there is a class of men known in this generation whose wealth rivals that of the Roman proconsuls who had drawn by rapacious cruelty, from the provinces given them to govern, the earnings of millions. Three generations back, the popular heart of England was stirred, as it has not been since, at the vast wealth secured in a few years by men in the service of the East India Company; yet theirs was trifling compared to what some Americans have been able to appropriate from the earnings of the people of this country. The immense amounts popularly attributed to many are startling. Not long since a New York merchant, about to visit Europe, made his will, and by that instrument bequeathed property to the amount of a hundred millions of dollars!

The inquiry will arise, how have these immense fortunes been made? It seems incredible that legitimate thrift alone could gather and keep them within its grasp. They can only be compared in magnitude to the treasures of Asiatic despots, or the exactions of imperial Rome.

The public lands of the United States have been the fertile source of many fortunes. Much of our vast domains has been the prey of plunderers whose keenness and elasticity of conscience have enabled them to rob, under the forms of law, the nation of its inheritance. The propositions annually before Congress to give away parts of the public lands for special purposes, would in a few years, if complied with, exhaust them.

It behooves all who have the prosperity of our country truly at heart, to examine into this subject, and devise means to stop this acquisition by individuals of such enormous wealth. It is eminently calculated to shake the perpetuity of our institutions, and our Republic. The wealth thus secured, and receiving the accretions of a few generations of enterprising men would become the most formidable enemy, in the hands of a few ambitious men that a free government ever had.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 1, 1873.
Editor of the Lexington Caucasian.
Please insert the following card:
I propose to bet five thousand dollars ($5,000) that President U. S. Grant, unless he dies from natural or other causes, will be assassinated before the tenth day of April, 1874.

If accepted, the money to be deposited on or before the tenth day of November next.

Parties desiring to wager larger or smaller amounts can address me at St. Louis, Mo., or through your columns.

Respectfully, H. CHAS. HARPER.

The above card appears in the Lexington Caucasian, with this editorial comment:

We have only to add that it will afford the Caucasian profound pleasure to announce, on the morning of April 11, that Mr. Harper has won his bet.

Although that fell spirit which plotted and achieved the murder of President Lincoln is not extinguished in some of the political enemies of President Grant, it cannot be supposed for a moment that General Grant will be much frightened by such childishness.

"The Old Testament is a dead weight upon an enlightened Christianity." It relates to a Jehovah who was simply a barbarous and bloodthirsty demigod. He was almost everlastingly engaged in slaying a little band of half savages and wholly robbers, called the Jews, to the work of wholesale assassination and plunder. He seemed to create nations solely for the purpose of having the pleasure of seeing them smitten, hip and thigh by his "chosen people"—a band of cut-throats, who, if in existence to-day, would be hung, shot, guillotined, or otherwise exterminated as enemies of human kind."

Who will deny that there is much work for Home Missions when such words as the above appear in a paper having the influence and ability of the Chicago Times? Such blasphemy is simply shocking. The promulgation of such sentiments are more destructive than war, pestilence and famine. They have a direct tendency to sap morality, and are calculated to strengthen inidelity and irreligion. Our entire system of law is based upon the divinity of the scriptures, and what can supply their place, should they be broken down?

The Chicago Times will do well to buy a Bible, turn to the Old Testament and ponder the destruction of Sodom.

EDITORIAL BUDGET.

The fight between Brule, Sioux and Ponca Indians resulted, according to the latest reports, in killing twenty warriors.

In the constitutional convention of Pennsylvania, ex-United States Senator Buckalew, referring to the course of Senator Morton, of Indiana, upon the proposed amendments to the manner of selecting presidential electors, said that Morton deserved the thanks of the nation for his course in that regard. The convention will hold a special session this (Monday) evening to consider the subject of the proposed amendments to be recommended by Senator Morton's committee of the United States Senate.

A dispatch from Bakersfield, Kern county, California, gives the particulars of a horrible affray near that place on election day. Larry Watson asked Moses Gilman for whom he had voted, and upon receiving a reply, struck him on the head with a pistol, inflicting a wound which resulted in the death of Gilman. Robert Peppard and others then attempted to arrest Larry, when he drew a knife and stabbed Peppard twice, inflicting mortal wounds. Peppard then got the knife away from Watson and stabbed him, when both fell and died within two minutes of each other.

The appropriations which Congress will be asked to make at the coming session, including the estimates for the next fiscal year and very large deficiencies for the present year, there is reason to believe, will be greatly in excess of the appropriations for any year since the beginning of President Grant's administration. This fact, considered in connection with the condition of the Government revenues since the beginning of the panic and possible permanent decrease in the customs receipts for many months to come, indicates that the Appropriation Committee will have very serious work before it in opposing demands for large expenditures. It already appears to be a matter of some doubt whether the revenues for the present fiscal year will meet the expenditures that have already been provided for by law and the deficiencies which Congress will be asked to allow, and there is such apprehension in the Treasury Department lest Congress will authorize expenditures which can only be met by an increase of taxation.

The trial of Marshal Bazaine was resumed at noon on the 17th. The president of the court continued his interrogation of the accused. He asked only two dispatches—one on the 15th of September, and the other on the 21st of October—were sent by the Marshal to the Government of national deference. Bazaine replied that he had received none of that Government's communications. In answer to other questions he stated that in sending Gen. Bombaki to the Empress he sent him to the one who, in his view, was the only representative of the Government. He had received no official information of the general elections. The president said the Marshal's intention of reaching Thionville did not agree with his theory that after the surrender of Sedan a sortie from Metz was impossible, and he put the question whether or not Bazaine had agreed with the Prussians to cease offensive movements from the time of Bombaki's departure. Bazaine replied by pointing to the subsequent engagements in September and October.

President.—Why was there no serious engagement for the purpose of supporting the negotiations of the Government of national defence?

Bazaine.—"Our sick and wounded prevented; such a course would have used up the army, while the enemy were all the time being reinforced. The Marshal continued: "His offer on the 29th of September to General Stieple to capitulate was a ruse."

In regard to the convention which he subsequently concluded with the Germans, he said: "My position was unprecedented. I was in a certain sense my own government. The duties of a military chief when a legal government exists are strictly defined. I by no means thought that to be the case in the presence of an insurrectionary government. There was no government; there was no nothing."

The President.—What! France then no longer existed?

General Zepeda, the deposed Governor of the State of Coahuila, has left Saltillo for Monclova, where the congress of the State, of which Dr. Salas is Governor, is in session. An engagement is reported to have taken place between General Zepeda's adherents and partisans of Dr. Salas near Monclova, in which Zepeda is said to have been defeated, and retired towards Piedras Navas, on the Rio Grande, while another account states that the action was not decisive, and that both parties are near Monclova.

Many of the prominent business houses in Saltillo closed on receipt of the news that actual fighting had occurred, fearing a pronunciamento against Zepeda's friends who still occupy the city.

In the Stokes trial on Friday the head clerk at the Manchester house testified that he saw the prisoner at the Hoffman house before the murder, and had a conversation with him about the trouble with Fisk. Stokes said Fisk was a blackmailer, and a loafer, and he (Stokes) carried a pistol and would shoot him. [At this point Stokes lost his calmness, became flushed in the face, and was about starting to contradict the witness, but was restrained by his mother.] Ex-Assistant District Attorney Fellows was asked by the prosecution to state a conversation that took place on the morning of the homicide between himself, John McKeon and their client, Stokes. The prisoner's counsel objected, and the objection was sustained by the Court unless the prosecution laid a foundation by proving that an indictment had been found against Stokes previous to that conversation. The prosecution closed their case against Stokes this afternoon, reserving the right to call further witnesses to-morrow. The counsel for the defence then commenced the opening address, but became unwell before its conclusion, and the court adjourned.
